WHAT IT MEANS TO BE A "REFLECTIVE PRACTITIONER"

March 14 at 12pm ET

»

The Collaborative Professionals of SW Florida is excited to invite you to an insightful presentation on March 14 at 12pm ET, mediators Michael Lang and Ellen Waldorf of The Reflective Practice Institute will discuss the principles of reflective practice and demonstrate the use of the reflective practice method in case consultations.

Reflective Practice is a unique method of case consultation that draws on a professional's knowledge and experience to learn from the surprising (both successful and frustrating) moments in practice. Learning from practice experiences—especially the surprising and puzzling moments—enhances a professional's competence and increases confidence.

Using the methods of Reflective Practice in a group setting is a proven and successful method for solving troubling practice dilemmas and becoming more capable and successful practitioners. The goal of a Reflective Practice Group is to achieve the highest level of performance by continually learning from and through our practice experiences.

This presentation will address:

- What It Means to Be a "Reflective Practitioner": the essential basic principles and methods of reflective practice.
- Applying Reflective Practice: the practical benefits.
- Reflective Practice Groups: invaluable resources for ongoing learning and growth in your professional journey.

The objective of Reflective Practice, and participation in Reflective Practice Groups, is to achieve learning that is personal, relevant, and lasting. This kind of learning allows practitioners to examine their thinking, evaluate their assumptions and interventions and find answers to puzzling and frustrating practice situations.

Whether you're a seasoned practitioner or just starting your journey in dispute resolution, this

AFCC Annual Conference 2024

The work of family law, mental health, and dispute resolution professionals is endlessly impacted by transition on an individual, family, and community level. These include the transition from an intact family to one that lives in two homes; children's transition between developmental stages; transitioning gender; transitioning to new statutes, processes and professional roles; transitioning in or out of a career; moving, which requires a transition between communities and parenting time plans; and transitioning to new relationships, marriages, and new family forms. Join AFCC to explore the role of transition in and out of our work.
